

Country Grove Estates Madison, WI

The Country Grove Estates neighborhood was developed in the late 1990s, when approximately 300 homes were built just to the east of the Ice Age Trail on Madison's southwest side. The Country Grove Neighborhood Association is active here, planning picnics, a 4th of July parade and other events throughout the year. The neighborhood includes protected green space, walkways, and an ecologically friendly waterway for residents to enjoy. It's common to see neighbors walking, biking, and jogging on the paths and streets nearby.

Parks & Recreation

The close proximity to the Ice Age National Scenic Trail means many miles of hiking opportunities just minutes from home. Several other parks also surround the neighborhood, including Country Grove Park, Ice Age Ridge Park, and Glacier Crossing Park. The playground at Cesar Chavez Elementary School is another very popular resource in the neighborhood. Chavez Elementary is one of Madison's newest schools and is just a short walk from home, making Country Grove a popular destination among Madison home buyers.
